World War 2 – 1943

John Thompson Strategic analyst - quotes from his book "Spirit Over Steel"

Oct 17th: The Kriegsmarine's last commerce raider (with 17 ships to its credit), Michel, is torpedoed by USS Tarpon off Japan. The Soviets bust open German defences near Kremenchug and cross the Dnieper near Gomel. Three Japanese barges burst out of the early morning darkness to raid the shore facilities supporting US troops at Finschafen, New Guinea. The 19 year old Private Junior Van Noy is manning a machinegun post on the water's edge and stands firm, even when his loader is wounded. He is dangerously exposed but fires continuously and with deadly effect. The Japanese land within 10m of his gun pit and he is repeatedly wounded but holds fast until his death. By the time this happens, half of the raiding force is dead and the roused US troops are equal to the task of rapidly finishing off the rest. He is posthumously awarded the Medal of Honor.

Oct 18th: US VI Corps makes advances in Italy, reaching Dragoni and liberating Gioia. The Soviet Army captures Melitiopol during heavy fighting.

Oct 19th: The Americans stage a major air raid on the Japanese airfields on Bougainville. In Italy, the Germans pull back from Dragoni just before the 3rd and 34th US Divisions attack. Manstein is frantic in trying to delay Soviet attacks long enough for the troops at the Bend of the Dnieper to escape.

Oct 20th: Japanese carrier aircraft from six carriers are sent to shore up the defences of Rabaul. VI US Corps continues to clear the Voltorno valley of German rearguards. There are heroes, and there are heroes who are among the bravest of the brave. Irena Sendler is arrested by the Germans this day and sent to Warsaw's Pawiak Prison with a death sentence. A bribe from her friends later saves her life and secures her release. Her jailers take pains to beat her unconscious and break all her limbs before dumping her naked in the snow of a nearby park – but it would take more than this to deter her from her work and she returns to it as soon as her battered body permits. For her constant efforts since 1939 to save Polish Jews, including smuggling 2,500 children out of the Warsaw Ghetto she is later named Righteous Among the Nations and eventually awarded Poland's highest civilian award, the Order of the White Eagle.

Oct 21st: Admiral Sir John Cunningham takes over from the long-standing Admiral Sir Andrew Cunningham as Commander of the RN in the Mediterranean (the two are not closely related, but Sir Andrew's brother is General Sir Alan Cunningham, who led the liberation of Ethiopia). The latter, one of Britain's great fighting admirals, is appointed First Sea Lord. Admiral Sir Dudley Pound, first Sea Lord from Oct 1939, dies after a long illness three weeks after resigning his office.

Oct 22nd: 8th and 5th Armies are struggling hard to advance in Italy against mud, floods and Germans; there are probes and attacks all up and along the entire front line.

Oct 23rd: Fierce fighting continues as the Soviets close on the Dnieper. A British light cruiser and a destroyer are sunk in a naval action in the Channel when they run into the escorts for a blockade runner. US aircraft sink destroyer and five ships in raids on Rabaul.

BC Veteran's Licence Plate Eligibility

Executive Summary of Final Report from BC Ministry of Attorney General.

Between July 23 and September 4, 2018, the Ministry of Attorney General (“the Ministry”) sought feedback from British Columbians about whether they believed the eligibility criteria for the Veteran’s Licence Plate (VLP) program should be expanded to include law enforcement – specifically Royal Canadian Mounted Police (RCMP) officers. The issue of eligibility criteria was raised with the Ministry in 2017 by the Royal Canadian Legion (RCL) Dominion Command and RCMP Veterans’ Association, who requested that the program’s current definition of “veteran” be expanded to make regular-duty RCMP officers eligible for VLPs. The British Columbia Veterans Commemorative Association (BCVCA), the organization that administers the VLP program, strongly opposed any changes to the current definition. Over the course of the six-week engagement, 4,386 British Columbians from around the province submitted their feedback via an online survey, with an additional nine responses received via email.

Individuals from the police and the Armed Forces made up an equal proportion of all respondents who completed the survey, with approximately a quarter of respondents identifying as either being (or having previously been) a police officer with no Armed Forces background (26%), or as being (or having previously been) in the Armed Forces with no policing background (27%) An additional 6% of respondents have a background in both policing and the Armed Forces.

Overall, respondents strongly favoured (63% in favour, 36% oppose) keeping the eligibility criteria the same and not expanding it to include RCMP or other police officers. With the exception of respondents who indicated having a policing background, all other respondent groups opposed broadening the criteria. Now that the results have been considered, and in line with feedback from respondents, government has announced there will not be any changes made to the eligibility criteria for the VLP program at this time.

Note that anyone who serves on UN or NATO operation under command of the Canadian Armed Forces as a member of the RCMP, municipal police, or Correctional Services of Canada, is eligible for Veterans licence plates.

Thanks to all the individuals and groups that sent letters to the Attorney General. They helped greatly in achieving this result.

The Carl Gustaf Is Getting Yet Another Lethal New Upgrade

Jared Keller    T&P on Facebook    October 9, 2018

Just over a year after announcing a handful of major upgrades to its arsenal of shoulder-fired M3 Carl Gustaf recoilless rifle, the legendary weapon is getting yet another lethal booster shot in the form of some deadly precision-guided munitions. Reporting from the annual Associated of the United States Army military-industrial kegger in Washington, D.C., Army Times offered up a glimpse of brand-new laser-guided munitions engineered by Raytheon for the 84mm M3 Multi-Role Anti-Armor Anti-Personnel Weapon System (MMAAWS). The laser-guided Gustaf munition offers “a multi-target warhead capable of defeating bunkers, concrete, light skinned vehicles and armored personnel carriers and has a range of nearly 2,000 meters,” Marine Corps Times reports, noting that the precision round provides flexibility for service members to fire from enclosures without fear of back blast.

The new round is just the latest upgrade to the iconic system. The M3A1 variant developed by Swedish Carl Gustaf godfather Saab Dynamics AB offers a titanium shell designed to reduce system weight and length. The M3A1 variant also offers the capability to fire off multiple salvos of specialized rounds — like, say, Raytheon’s laser-guided munition — in a departure from the one-and-done weapons like the AT-4 anti-tank system.

The new round comes as the Army is making good on its pledge to make the Gustaf a fixture of every infantry squad. The service tripled its annual budget request for the recoilless rifles over last fiscal year, complete with an explicitly approved acquisition objective (AAO) of 2,460 total through fiscal 2023. The Army has increasingly pivoted to two theaters that seem well suited for the M3E1: Eastern Europe, where service members are increasingly fielding the Gustaf (and low-cost AT-4 the M3E1 is partially designed to replace) to deter Russian aggression; and the Global War on Terror in Afghanistan, where the system has spanked militants sporadically since at least 2012. While the Army and Marine Corps are currently eyeing the Carl Gustaf for extra firepower among infantry squads — the latter for the first time in its history — a Raytheon representative told Army Times that only U.S. Special Operations Command has an open requirement for a precision-guided Carl Gustaf round at this time. Something tells me that they won't be the only ones for long.

This Advanced Night Vision Goggle is Headed to Army and Marine Units

Todd South 10 Oct 2018

An as-yet identified unit will be the first to field an advanced, binocular night vision goggle that incorporates day/night optics and thermal and targeting capabilities, all in one package, by this time next year. Speaking at the Association of the United States Army's annual meeting this week, three leaders tied closely to work on improving soldier lethality shared details of the goggle's development and timelines. Brig Gen Anthony Potts, who leads Program Executive Office Soldier, said that 10,000 pairs of the Enhanced Night Vision Goggle-Binocular, or ENVG-B, will be fielded to Army units starting next fall and through 2021. The specific unit to first receive the new goggle has not been identified, but it will be a close combat-focused unit, likely infantry or cavalry scouts. The Marine Corps is scheduled to receive 3,100 systems over that same period, Potts said.

The Army's new Enhanced Night Vision Goggles-Binocular uses wireless technology to merge the weapon sight with day/night vision, thermal and augmented reality to the soldier's view. (BAE Systems)"/>The Army's new Enhanced Night Vision Goggles-Binocular uses wireless technology to merge the weapon sight with day/night vision, thermal and augmented reality to the soldier's view. (BAE Systems)

But first, in the coming months, some Army units will get an immediate upgrade with the ENVG-III, which has some of the same capabilities but in a monocular setup. While the day/night optic and thermal vision is an advance over much of the night vision being sported by soldiers now, the key change is the Rapid Targeting Acquisition feature. This is a wireless connection between the soldier's weapon and the vision device that allows the shooter to line up the target via the weapon sight camera. Soldiers can shoot from the hip, around corners and in other novel ways not available with current systems. And early data is proving promising, officials said. Brig Gen Dave Hodne, director of the Army's Soldier Lethality Cross-Functional Team and Infantry School commandant, shared results of recent ENVG-B testing on the range. Shooters using the ENVG-B saw 100 percent improvement with M4 carbine qualification, 300 percent improvement on detecting targets, and a 30 percent to 50 percent decrease in time to employ their weapon. Previous estimates about fielding the device suggested fielding was more than three years away. Part of the reason fielding has been sped up is the additional funding and top leader prioritization of the program, which officials say makes an immediate impact in marksmanship and lethality.

Who Is It

Last Week: The vehicle is a 1946 Cadillac Fleetwood sedan flying the flags of the Lieutenant Governor of BC who was visiting the troops fighting the floods in the Fraser Valley in 1948. The LG was Charles Arthur Banks. He was a mining engineer who was one of the founders in 1926 of the Vancouver based international mining company Placer Development Ltd, which became Placer Dome Inc. in 1987 after merging with Dome Mines Ltd.

This Week: Ahoy, mateys! We were overwhelmed with responses to our last naval-themed quiz, and were over-joyed, until we realized that we had posted a navel, not naval photo. In any case, thanks to those who recognized Millicent Throgmorton-Lipschitz, Miss Bessborough Armoury and Miss HMCS Discovery of 1962. That dual honour was a first and, so far, only. Those wanting a non-pixilated version of the photo may contact the model herself at Happy Rest Seniors' Home in White Rock.

So, having corrected our spell checker, here is this week's photo. It is of a mighty ship, steaming majestically under the welcoming span of a well-known local landmark and late-afternoon parking lot. From the lack of luxury condos in the background, we can be sure that this was taken in more primitive, less prosperous days. Now, to our multiple questions. First and foremost is the simple question: what ship is this? Bonus points are given for the year. Secondly, what is the connection between this ship and a recent quiz? And, thirdly, can you see anything in this photo that might link to the history of 15th Field Regiment, RCA? We hope to hear from you, both navel, and naval enthusiasts. Send your answers to Bob Mugford, bob.mugford@outlook.com the esteemed editor, or to the author, John Redmond (johnd.\_redmond@telus.net).
